

Faith and Philanthropy

Maximize your philanthropic impact in alignment with your faith

We all want a better world. But the challenges facing the planet are too complex to solve alone. We must work together, combining skills and re-sources, to collaborate on projects with the power to create lasting change. For many philanthropists, faith can play an important role in their giving.

What is the Faith and Philanthropy network?

The Faith and Philanthropy network connects like-minded, philanthropic peers motivated by the same faith and values, so that collectively you can drive social impact and innovation – and shape the future you want to see.

Why does UBS speak about faith?

Working closely with our clients and their families, we recognize the important role faith plays for many in shaping values, identifying need, and helping others. It is the reason we continue to build on our experience to convene Faith and Philanthropy gatherings from various faith motivations.

Which faith motivations does UBS speak about?

To date, we have organized events and recorded podcasts that explore philanthropy and purpose from either a Christian, Jewish or Muslim perspective with the intent to explore other faith motivations in the future.

What can you expect?

- Attend exclusive gatherings that explore purpose and philanthropy from various faith motivations
- Expand your network by connecting with like-minded philanthropists and share best practices
- Enhance your philanthropy skills and learn about solutions to some of the world's pressing social problems
- Gain access to vetted UBS Optimus Foundation programs that are faith inspired or faith based but not faith biased
- Join a collective giving circle
